Law Centre
Scotland

MEMBERSHIP FORM

The Environmental Law Centre Scotland is a not for profit law centre providing advice to community groups, individuals and ngos on environmental and planning law in the public interest. The objects of the law centre are to encourage better compliance with environmental law in Scotland, by providing advice on most aspects of law that affects the environment, by providing training and seminars, and by representing groups before courts and tribunals.

We define environmental law in a broad way – it includes not just issues such as nature conservation, climate change, air and water pollution but also issues such as planning law, cultural and built heritage, transport and environmental impacts on human health.

Annual membership is £15 (£10 concession). As a member you are entitled to attend and vote at our AGM.
